What is creativity?

Create comes from the Latin creare that meant "to produce from nothing" and also "to engender, to procreate", in English this verb evolved in turn towards raising which meant "nurturing a child, instructing, educating"

In the Genesis of the Old Testament The following phrase appears: "God created heaven and the Earth from nothing." In this context, creation would be to conceive from nothing.

Creativity is also related to transpersonal psychology.

Methods and science comes from people like Carl G. Jung, psychiatrist and psychologist and Roberto Assagioli (1888-1974) Italian psychiatrist, creator of the Psychosynthesis; This includes transpersonal psychology, which incorporates the soul into its model.

In Dreams Academy we use Psychosynthesis but also Mindfulness and cognitive methods as the basis for personal development and certified coaching

In our workshops and coaching we do exercises with learning from experiencing supported by latest science. The methods of the basis of Psychosynthesis and Mindfulness: Conscious Attention as a process tool: it is a practice in which we become aware of the different facets of our experience at the present time. This quality of consciousness is the basis of all creative life, as it allows us to be honest, pragmatic, awake, brave, and live with a deep sense of initiative.

Magnus Dahl: "What always has been fascinating for me is how the creative process can help the new innovations to evolve at the same time as a group will relax and work less to achieve more."
